The RIGHT-OF-WAY WAR

THE SHINING RIBBONS OF STEEL FOLLOWED THE RIVER... BUT BEFORE THE CONSTRUCTION GANGS COULD GO TO WORK, LAND HAD TO BE BOUGHT! MIKE MORSE, THE RAILROAD REPRESENTATIVE, HAD THE JOB OF BUYING IT AS CHEAPLY AS POSSIBLE... USING THREATS OR VIOLENCE. WHEN THE RANCHERS REFUSED TO SELL! HUEY TOFTS DIDN'T ARGUE AT FIRST... UNTIL HE SAW MORSE IN ACTION, DEALING WITH A TROUBLESOME RANCHER!

TURN HIM LOOSE, MORSE! IF YOU FEEL TOUGH... TRY ME!

YOU GET ONE MORE CHANCE, CRONE! ARE YOU... TOFTS! GET OUT OF HERE!

MIKE MORSE HAD ALWAYS LIKED HIS JOB... TILL THEN HE'D ENJOYED DRIVING PEOPLE FROM THEIR LAND!

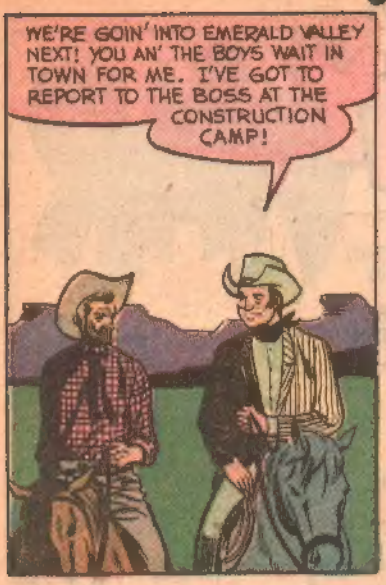
GET MOVIN', BIDGELY! DON'T COME BACK! THIS IS RAILROAD LAND NOW!

YUH PAID HIM FIFTY DOLLARS, MIKE. HOW MUCH WILL I PUT DOWN ON THE SALES CONTRACT WE TURN IN TO THE OFFICE?

MAKE IT FIVE HUNDRED, STARR! WE GOTTA GET PAID FOR OUR TROUBLE!

27 ACRES

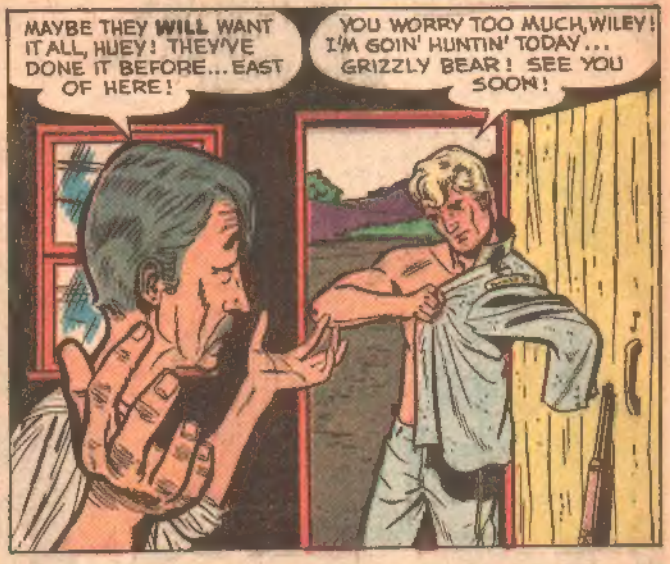
OUTLAWS OF THE WEST



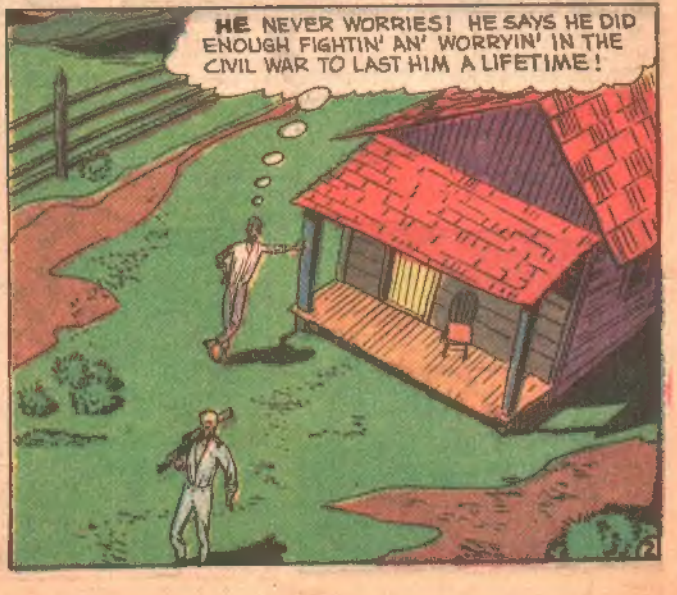
WE'RE GOIN' INTO EMERALD VALLEY NEXT! YOU AN' THE BOYS WAIT IN TOWN FOR ME. I'VE GOT TO REPORT TO THE BOSS AT THE CONSTRUCTION CAMP!

MORSE'S BOSS, HARRY TEAGUE, HAD NO IDEA HOW MORSE GOT THE LAND THE RAILROAD NEEDED ... HE JUST KNEW MORSE GOT RESULTS!
NICE GOING, MIKE! YOU PAID TOO MUCH FOR THE LAND BUT WE HAVEN'T GOT THE TIME TO HAGGLE OVER PRICES! HOW ABOUT EMERALD VALLEY?

HUEY TOFTS CALLED HIMSELF A RANCHER! HE HAD A HUNDRED HEAD OF CATTLE TO PROVE IT... BUT HE DIDN'T WORK TOO HARD AT THE JOB!
'WE'LL HAVE TO SELL, HUEY! I'LL HATE TO LEAVE THE VALLEY!
DON'T LEAVE THEN! THE RAILROAD ONLY WANTS RIGHT OF WAY... THEY DON'T NEED ALL THE LAND!

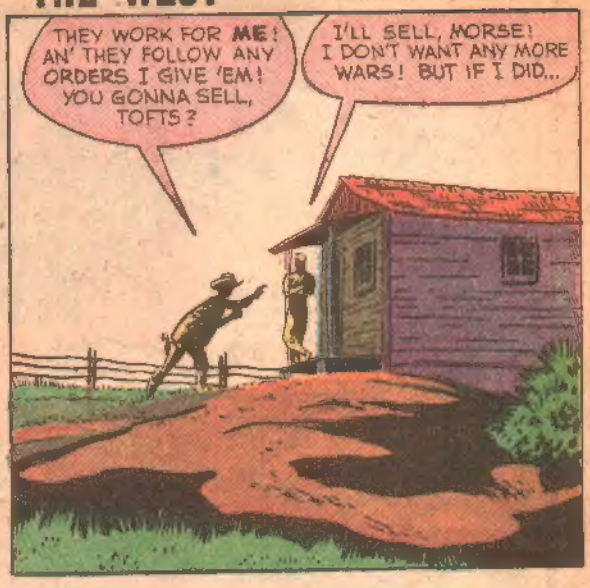


MAYBE THEY WILL WANT IT ALL, HUEY! THEY'VE DONE IT BEFORE... EAST OF HERE!
YOU WORRY TOO MUCH, WILEY! I'M GOIN' HUNTIN' TODAY... GRIZZLY BEAR! SEE YOU SOON!



OUTLAWS OF THE WEST

MORSE MOVED INTO EMERALD VALLEY TWO DAYS LATER! HE WENT TO SEE TOFTS, FIRST...



I EXPECTED TROUBLE, BOSS! WILL HE SELL?
YEAH... HE'LL SELL! BUT HE MADE ME SWEAT FOR A MINUTE! WATCH HIM, STARR! HE CAN GET PRETTY NASTY!

HUEY TOFTS LOVED EMERALD VALLEY... BUT FOUR YEARS OF FIGHTING IN THE CIVIL WAR HAD SICKENED HIM OF VIOLENCE!

SALVATION

Mrs. Ada Shaw could no longer cry. Her red eyes told of weeping that must have lasted a long time. Now she had buried her pride and come for help, to the sheriff of Carver City.

"I promised Jed that I would raise our son to be a law abiding citizen. But Bob is wild and doesn't want to think of going East to be educated. Know what he wants to do? Join the Curtis Gang and be an outlaw! His idol is Marc Curtis, one of the worst men the West has ever seen. And if I know Bob, he is as stubborn as a mule. He'll join that gang. Then what will happen to him? He'll either die at the end of a rope or some posse will hunt him down. Sheriff Geary, I have come to you for help. I want you to save my son from himself!"

For twenty years Dan Geary had done his best to try to help Ada. But she had been a proud stiff-necked woman. Her husband had given his life to save his best friend, Dan Geary. To accept any kind of help would have been, to her way of thinking, like taking a payment for a human life. So she did her best to make a living. She worked as a seamstress and then opened a small boarding house. But somehow she had failed. For her son was headed for destruction on the wrong side of the law.

"Of course I'll help," replied the sheriff. "But talking to your son won't do a bit of good. Some of the other men in town have tried to show him he's headed on the wrong path. But there is one man who can help me. The Prince Albert Kid is in Abilene. I'm going to ride there now and see what he can do for me."

The famous man was seated outside of the U.S. Marshall's office when he spotted his friend.

"What brings you to Abilene?" asked the Prince Albert Kid. "The last time I saw you was at Fort Benton. You brought in those rustlers who had taken the government stock intended for the Indians."

"Suppose we take a little walk," suggested the sheriff. "Then I'll tell you what is on my mind. It's going to be tough, but you just have to help me."

The two men walked down the muddy street. When Sheriff Geary had finished relating the details, the famous man of the West smiled.

"I'm going to try something entirely different to help save that youth! But it will cost money. Can you raise about four thousand dollars?"

The sheriff's eyes almost popped out of his head when he heard that amount of cash mentioned.

"I have a half interest in the Golden Lady Mine. I'll be able to raise that money from Banker Jones with my share as collateral. I know you well enough not to ask for details now. What do I do when I get the money?"

"Meet me at Pines' Bush in a week," replied the Prince Albert Kid. "Then we ride for the hill country. We will use your money to save the soul of a man. Bullets won't help this time. So we'll see what a little faith in human nature can do."

Sheriff Dan Geary met his friend at the appointed time. The Prince Albert Kid didn't tell him where they were going exactly. But the two headed south for the hill country.. They rode each day until sundown and then made camp. At the end of the third day, the sheriff was very curious.

"We haven't seen a soul. Nobody lives in this part of the territory."

"We have been watched constantly," replied the famous man of the West. "When we build our fire, we will have visitors."

There was a coffee pot over the fire when the voice of a man rang out.

"Don't either of you move. I know who you are. Why are you here?"

"Hello Marc," greeted the Prince Albert Kid. "Put that gun down. I come here to find you and your boys. I have a business proposition to make to all of you. I saved your life once and you said you would never raise a hand against me. I figured we were safe [illegible] to your hide-out."

Marc Curtis sat down at the fire. Four of his boys were in the background. He listened to the story of the young boy who wanted to join his gang.

"I want you and your boys to show him how terrible a life one leads when a man is on the wrong side of the law," said the Prince Albert Kid. "I will give you a thousand dollars now. And two thousand more at the end. All you have to do is follow my plan."

"But," suggested the outlaw, "What happens if this Bob Shaw decides he wants to be an outlaw in spite of this plan of yours?"

"That is a calculated risk that must be taken into consideration," acknowledged the Prince Albert Kid. "You and your boys will be in Carver City four days from today."

The good citizens of Carver City were minding their own business when the Curtis gang rode into town. Somebody rushed to the sheriff's office and then stopped; remembering that Dan Geary had taken Mrs. Shaw to visit the mine. The riders headed for the Big Drink Saloon where a card game was in progress. Marc Curtis walked up to Bob Shaw who was watching the gamblers.

"They tell me you want to join my gang. Get on your horse and ride with me."

Before the stunned townsfolks knew what happened, the gang had left with a new recuit. A few miles along the road they were joined by the Prince Albert Kid. He had changed his famous telltale coat for an open shirt, was wearing a faded pair of army trousers, and still carrying his two pearl handled six shooters. They all rode together until they reached a small wooden house. Then Marc Curtis shouted at the top of his voice to the occupants.

"I know you're all in there. Jake, you and your wife Edna, and your kids. We warned you to get out of this place. You didn't listen. Now we're going to burn your house down and you'll all roast in it!"

One of the Curtis gang lit a torch and handed it to Bob Shaw with instructions.

"We'll cover you with our guns. You just threw the torch on the house. It'll go up in flames in a minute. And don't mind if you hear his kids scream for help. Serves them right!"

Bob Shaw found he could hear his heart beat like a heavy hammer within himself. He made an excuse.

"I feel a little dizzy. You throw the torch."

A few minutes later the building was ablaze. Bob Shaw would have felt better had he fainted. The men rode away and Marc Curtis spoke to his latest recruit.

"Better to ride away now. You won't hear the screams of those kids as they burn. After we eat, there's something else we're going to do."

The men ate with relish but Bob couldn't touch a bit of food. The Prince Albert Kid sat on one side of him - - - the gang leader on the other.

"There are a group of miners who sleep in the open," explained Marc Curtis. "I'll give you my knife. Just kill each of them. Then we take the gold they have with them."

The men rode again until they came to the side of Walton Mountain. Here they dismounted. It was getting dark and they walked slowly. In a clearing could be seen five forms wrapped in blankets. Marc Curtis gave Bob his knife.

"Now's the time to show us the stuff you're made of. Kill 'em all."

The knife fell from Bob Shaw's hand and he gave a feeble excuse.

"Must have a touch of the fever. I can't do it."

"I think you're made of milk," sneered the gang leader. "You're in this with us. If we get caught and hung so do you. Get back with the boys. I'll finish off those miners myself."

Bob Shaw fainted. When he came to he saw a small bag beside him.

"Your share of the stuff," explained Marc Curtis. "They didn't put up a struggle."

Suddenly a loud voice interrupted with a challenge that couldn't be misunderstood.

"This is U.S. Marshall Groggins speaking. You are surrounded. Put up a fight and we'll wipe you out to the last man."

The Prince Albert Kid was at the side of Bob Shaw and quickly spoke to him.

"Your horse is down at the creek. Crawl on your knees. Then ride back home. And don't worry."

The men were having a good laugh after Bob Shaw had left the camp. But there was a serious look on Marc Curtis' face as he said what was on his mind.

"You can have the money back you gave us. And don't pay us any more. Maybe it sounds crazy to you, Prince Albert Kid, but we're finished with this kind of life. Too bad things couldn't be arranged for us so we can start life again as free men. That fellow Bob got a better break than we did."

"You're getting the same break," replied the famous man of the West. "I have a pardon here for each of you. To use at my discretion. You showed you were all worthy of a new chance, so you all get it."
